State of the Credit Union By Ronald Scott, President and CEO

Building Financial Relationships
One Member at a Time
Message from The President:

One thing that sets Appalachian Community Federal Credit Union apart from many other companies is that we don't report to Wall Street. We focus on our members. When I talk with them, they want to know how we are using our financial resources to serve them. What are we doing to help Appalachian families manage their finances and move forward in a still-slaggy economy? Is ACFCU keeping service levels high and rates competitive? How well are we fulfilling our unique mission of serving this area?

businesses are key to a community's success? At Appalachian Community Federal Credit Union, we are equipped and determined to support small businesses in the eight counties that we serve. With Business Banking checking accounts, loans, lines of credit, merchant services, and much more, we can meet your needs in this area. With our unique size and flexibility, we can work with our members for common goals, not one sided qualifications. I encourage our small business members to check us out for financial and lending needs as well as considerable savings.

As we celebrate 80 years of serving both the historic paper industry in Kingsport and the people in the Appalachian communities, we recognize the support and participation of our members that made these recent advancements possible. Thank you for taking this journey with us as your credit union prepares to serve your family and communities for another 80 years.

Sincerely,

Ronald E. Scott
President and Chief Executive Officer

Tips for Avoiding Fraud This Holiday Season

Don't Give Out Your Personal Information

Never respond to phone calls, emails and texts that are claiming to be ACFCU or another financial institution asking about your accounts or asking for personal information. This is a type of identity fraud where thieves are trying to get your personal information such as social security numbers, date of birth, address, credit or debit card numbers or even passwords for your accounts.

Appalachian Community Federal Credit Union will never send you an unsolicited message requesting this type of information. If you ever receive this type of message or phone call, contact ACFCU immediately.

Lighten the Wallet

It is not a good idea to carry your Social Security card, birth certificates or even passports with you. Also leave unused credit cards at home in a secure location. Never carry pin numbers or account passwords with you.

Inventory Your Credit Cards

Routinely scan or make copies of the fronts and backs of the credit cards that you carry in your wallet. Keep the copies in a secured location at home. If your wallet or purse is stolen or lost you will need to respond quickly.

Keeping Receipts

It is a great idea to keep receipts during the holidays for returns, but it is also important to keep them to review your monthly checking account statements and credit card statements for accuracy. If a charge appears incorrect you will have your receipts to dispute the transactions.

Trust Your Instincts

They are usually right. If you feel that your account information has been compromised by a merchant, online vendor, restaurant or ATM contact your account holders or the credit union immediately.

Monitor Account Balances

Monitor your account balances and transactions a little closer at the holidays, especially checking accounts, debit card transactions and your credit union credit card. Remember to use the ACFCU account alerts and the MYACFCU online banking for monitoring and balances.

Have a very Merry Christmas by avoiding fraud and thieves this year. When in doubt call us!
